

Join us in bringing an eco-friendly collaborative art installation to the Poe Center!

Help us raise $2,000 to bring a community-made public art installation to the Alice Aycock Poe Center for Health Education.

Artist Jane Cheek will facilitate a collaborative eco-friendly community art project and installation to celebrate the grand re-opening of Poe's renovated gardens.

By donating you will be supporting the arts and promoting sustainability in our community. Your contribution will help us purchase the necessary materials, pay for the artists' time and expertise, and ensure that this project is accessible to all.

Every donation makes a difference. Whether you can give $5 or $500, your support is greatly appreciated. Together, we can make this project a reality and create a lasting impact on our community.
